of the air, two of which he carried over the goal for touchdowns. Kirk kicked the goals.

In the third quarter Kirk put over another touchdown, grabbing a pass behind the goal. Watkins goal. Alma then came to life and carried the ball far into Hillsdale territory, and almost put over a touchdown. Inside of the ten yard line Alma was held. Two line plunges failed to give the ground, and two passes failed, the ball going to Hillsdale.

Early in the fourth quarter Hillsdale counted another touchdown. A forward pass put the Blue and White in front of the goal, and Beck, smashed through the line on the longest line smash that Hillsdale got, going six yards to the goal. Watkins failed to kick goal. Shortly after Hillsdale started another drive to the Alma goal. Alma broke up three attempts to score on forward passes, and L. Kirk was called back, and booted the ball across the up-rights for a 25-yard drop kick. This ended the scoring, but did not end the fight that Alma put up, as the Maroon and Cream made another threat at the Hillsdale goal before time was called.

THE PILGRIM AND THE BOOK

A dramatic service entitled "The Pilgrim and the Book," written by Percy MacKaye, will be given in the Presbyterian church on Sunday evening, November 21. This service has been written in honor of the Pilgrims' centenary. It has been asked that every community in the United States put this on.

The theme of the service is the power of truth, as revealed in the Bible, to set free the human soul, in particular from the shackles of Persecution and the Fear of Death. This theme applies historically to the spiritual struggles and achievements of the Pilgrim Fathers, but also symbolically to man himself as a pilgrim seeking "freedom to worship God."

The purpose and form of the service are not, then in any sense those of an historical pageant; they are rather those of a new (and very old) relationship between dramatic expression and religious aspiration, seeking to fuse these in a ritual of plastic simplicity.

The dramatic part of the service is under the splendid direction of Prof. Roy Hamilton of the college, while Prof. Beausang directs the musical part of the service.

Watch for further announcements concerning this unusual dramatic service.
